Good News for Healthy Hearts!

Prevention is always better than cure, especially when it comes to heart health. So if you have poor circulation, high blood pressure or runaway stress—conditions that can increase your risk for cardiovascular problems—therapeutic-grade essential oils and specific nutrients can be of immense help to you.

De-stressing is a must for healthy hearts

If you're not getting off the merry-go-round periodically, you may need to schedule time solely for relaxation. Many of us—particularly men—don't realize that chronic, constant stress takes a heavy toll on every body system.

Three Aromatic Ways to Better Heart Health

- 1 For a mini-time out, breathe deeply of a relaxing essential oil such as Lavender for 2-3 minutes. It's as simple as that.
- 2 Self-massage is a fantastic way to unwind. Massage shoulders, back of neck and both sides of your arms – always working toward the heart.
- 3 For deep, lasting stress reduction, get a monthly therapeutic massage. It will increase circulation and help speed detoxification of the body.

Need more encouragement to get your monthly massage? Read on...

Did you know that therapeutic massage alone can reduce blood pressure by up to 40 points? When combined with selected essential oils, it aids in countering the effects of stress and treats headaches, commonly associated with high blood pressure, post-stroke and other cardiovascular conditions.^{2,3}

Specific Nutrients Can Reduce Cardiac Risk Factors⁴

Research has identified risk factors that may be warning signs on the road to cardiovascular degeneration. What's very encouraging is that we can reduce these risk factors by adding specific nutrients to our diets.

Risk Factor - Low antioxidant status

Add nutrients that act as antioxidants, such as Chinese wolfberry, Vitamin E, CoEnzyme Q10. YL Product CardiaCare™

Risk Factor - Low levels of fatty acids

Add nutrients that promote healthy cholesterol levels and ratios, such as fish oils, garlic and fiber. YL Products HRT™, Essential Omegas™

Risk Factor - Low levels of magnesium and potassium

Found in figs, almonds, nuts, seeds, dark-green vegetables, lemons. YL Product CardiaCare and others

TOP ESSENTIAL OILS FOR HEART HEALTH

Helichrysum stimulates circulation, enhancing the cleansing of plaque and debris from blood vessels.

Marjoram may calm nervous tension and have a diuretic effect.

Ylang Ylang was traditionally used to balance heart function and lower high blood pressure.

Cypress is one of the oils used most to stimulate the circulatory system.

Georgetown University Medical Center

is searching for safe and proven natural products to treat Type II diabetes and the high blood pressure that often accompanies it. Edible oils of oregano, cumin, fenugreek and pumpkin seed were tested on animals with encouraging results.¹
